

Interactive Digital Journalism Guidelines

Interactive journalism is a new media reporting style that allows audiences to engage with content. Key components include interactive infographics, user polls, and reader feedback forms. By implementing interactive elements, digital reporters can foster a more active reader base, allowing individuals to explore data at their own pace. This increases transparent journalism practices and builds reader trust in news media brands.